There have been no arrivals from England since our last.

There has not been time for any thing further to transpire relative to the negociations between our own and the Bhurmese authorities in Ava. The India Gazette of the 10th instant gives a most melancholy picture of the state of the Army in Arrakan. The casualties had been numerous, while almost all those who survived were reduced to a state of great debility and emaciation. Hardly a native Regt. could muster more than twenty effective men, and the collective amount of the two European Regts., which could be employed on any effective or active service, does not exceed 200 men. It is also stated that the Bhurmese were well aware of the non-effective state of our army, and meditated an attack on our position. General Morrison was very unwell, and had gone on board ship, for the purpose of moving about a little for the benefit of his health.

We are sorry to state that considerable sickness has prevailed in several districts of Guzerat. At Baroda and Kaira few of the officers have escaped attacks of remittent and intermittent fevers. At Mhow the European Horse and Foot Artillery had suffered a good deal from similar attacks. The Epidemic Cholera has been prevalent in several parts of Kattywar and Cutch, and some fatal cases had occurred among the troops which left Bombay, both during the voyage, and after their landing at Mandavie.

By the latest accounts the troops which had disembarked at Mandavie had marched from that place, and it is stated that they would probably be stationed within five miles of Bhooj. Every thing was quiet, and it was reported that the Scindians were in a sad state of consternation, being doubtful of our intentions, and at the same time expecting a visit from Runjeet Sing, who every now and then makes a large and effectual demand upon their treasury, to part with any part of the contents of which goes sadly against the grain with the Ameers. The sportsmen make loud complaints. Three successive years of drought have killed all the game, and there was not a black partridge to be seen.

Accounts from Cabul mention, that Mr. Morcroft had returned to that place from Bochara, where he had met with a very cordial reception.

There is nothing we have heard so frequently made the subject of conversation, or so often remarked ourselves, among the little faults of character that require correction in Bombay, than the apparent insolence of many of the native coachmen. The word native is perhaps superfluous, as there are no other in the place; and we beg to explain, that we do not mean coachmen belonging to natives, but the coachmen of European Gentlemen. There are, we believe, in respect to carriages of every description meeting and passing each other, certain rules, which have been framed for general convenience and to prevent accidents, and we only wish the rules in question to be strictly adhered to. When two carriages of nearly the same size and weight approach each other, the coachmen, from a mutual fear of the effects of any collision, generally give up a due portion of the road; but we have almost constantly remarked that these knights of the whip, when they meet a buggy or lighter vehicle, rarely think it necessary to give way in the slightest degree, but keep their unaltered course, in the middle of the road. Independent of the chance of accidents from this conduct on the part of many of the coachmen, nothing can be more insolent than their assumption of the rights of others, and their contempt of the rules of the road; and, as to all appearance they do not naturally feel, that courtesy becomes an elevated station, we trust they will at least be taught the necessity of adhering to established regulations. We beg also to take this opportunity of mentioning, for the benefit of the new arrivals, or of those old residents who may not have made the discovery before, that the road extending from the Marine Battalion lines to the Apollo Gate was not intended as a race-course, and that till the latter is finished, the beach will be found a very good substitute.

We trust that our contemporary of the Bombay na Sumachar will take up the subjects we have just noticed, and will point out the necessity of all coachmen adhering to the rules of the road, and the impropriety of horse-racing on the public highways.

Dr. Whitelaw Ainslie, formerly of the Madras Establishment, has published a letter to the Hon'ble Court of Directors, on the subject of the epidemic Cholera which has so long prevailed in India. Dr. Ainslie has a high medical reputation, and his opinions ought to carry with them proportional weight; but we are afraid he has done little in the present instance, to diminish the obscurity which involves the mysterious subject which he has undertaken to elucidate. The whole of the reasoning in the letter is founded on something very like assumption. In the first place, he takes for granted that what has generally been called the spasmodic cholera,* is no other than the simple sporadic, or common cholera, in an epidemic form. In the next place, he assumes, without what we would consider any thing like proof, that the symptoms of sporadic cholera are produced by an acid generated in the stomach; and the induction, of course, follows, the two diseases being considered radically the same, that an acid is also the exciting cause of the epidemic cholera. In this stage of the reasoning, it is natural that the origin of the fatal acid should be explained. In the common, or sporadic cholera, Dr. Ainslie considers that it is directly produced by some acescent substance being taken into the stomach, such as lime-juice of bad quality, unripe fruit of any kind, crude vegetables, the toddy of the cocoa-nut tree in a state of fermentation, and the like. These causes of acidity, in particular cases, are obvious enough; but when Dr. Ainslie comes to manufacture a sufficient quantity of his powerful ingredient, to supply the demand necessary to support his theory of the exciting cause of epidemic cholera, he is obliged to employ a more complicated machinery. He deduces, from some experiments of Dr. Wilson Philip on rabbits, that if galvanic electricity and the nervous influence are not identical, there is a remarkable analogy between the two powers, and that the one may serve as a substitute for the other. Considering this intimate connection between the nervous influence and voltaic fluid as proved, Dr. Ainslie supposes, (and it is mere supposition,) that a perverted distribution of the latter is the remote cause of epidemic cholera: that this perverted distribution produces a great diminution of the nervous energy; which diminution of the nervous energy, by its effect on the digestive organs, gives origin to an acid; which acid is the immediate exciting cause of cholera. Such are the steps in the reasoning by which Dr. Ainslie supports his new theory of the cause of epidemic cholera, and which will probably last as long as the fancies about oose rice, diminution of the free electric fluid of the atmosphere, and an over-abundance of carbonic acid gas, all of which have been cited as the great agents in producing that fatal malady.—The treatment recommended is of course suited to the theory, and is the same as Dr. Ainslie employed while in India, with success, in common cholera. Every proposed plan, either for arresting the progress, or diminishing the mortality, of what may be termed the great epidemic, ought, in our opinion, to meet with a fair and speedy trial; and we therefore give below, for the benefit of our Medical readers, in the Doctor's own words, the mode of cure which he recommends. We have thought it necessary to give an abstract of his opinions, as to the cause of the disease, in order that the principle upon which his proposed practice is founded may be properly understood, and have only to ask pardon for occupying so much of our columns, with what may be considered by many as not legitimate matter for the pages of a newspaper. The following is the part of Dr. Ainslie's work, which describes the practice he would employ in epidemic cholera:—

"It having been then granted that the epidemic Cholera is but the Cholera Morbus in its most severe form, and my having fully ascertained that, in ninety-nine cases of a hundred, the cure for that was simply an antacid, and that the best was calcined magnesia; I should with great confidence order it at once, in the more serious affection, in a full dose, but in tepid water, not milk,* and also by enema in barley water; previously, however, having recommended a purgative injection, from a conviction that nothing contributes so much to relieve the stomach as what gives a tendency downwards to offending matter. Should the magnesia be rejected, I would instantly repeat it, and with it a good portion of powdered ginger or black pepper: and then, fearing the case likely to become extreme, I should order a small blister to the inside of the lower part of each leg, to keep up as much as possible the vis vitæ in the extremities. Supposing, however, but which I never experienced in the sporadic disease, that the magnesia came up again and again, I should look for the flow of bile (which the violent straining often excites) as a something that might come to my aid; and, in promoting this, I have frequently found hard rubbing with the hand upon the region of the liver prove successful. If also here disappointed, I should (still considering the cause of the vomiting to be of an acid nature, and such a one as must not be shut up by an opiate) have recourse to some other antacid; for surely we may question the policy of closing the gates of the garrison, whilst the enemy still storms within. I cannot but express a regret that more (47) had not been done to ascertain, by chemical analysis, what was the peculiar nature of the fluid vomited up; for to be told that it is greenish, or turbid, or whitish, can avail us nothing. Should the administration of antacids succeed in stopping the vomiting, little more will be necessary than next morning to carry off what bile may have been stirred up by some purgative medicine—such as the compound colocynth pill with a little calomel; and if any opiate is given to sooth, after all the offending matter is worked off, it ought to be of the gentlest kind, caution being used that no food is taken for some days of a nature at all likely to renew the irritation of the stomach. Weak, well prepared coffee, without milk, with a little toasted bread, I found the safest diet on such occasions. Nay, I have had reason, in more cases than one, to think that coffee so prepared had peculiar virtues in checking vomiting; and we shall by and bye see that the inhabitants of Luconia take it with this view 48. If, in spite of all I had done, the vomiting still continued, and that it appeared from what was passed by stool that no bile flowed into the duodenum, owing, perhaps, to the severity of the spasms constricting the mouths of the biliary ducts; I should try what could be done by giving either half an ounce or an ounce of calf's bile, or that of the ox a little diluted, and repeating the dose if necessary; or, if neither of these could be got, by administering the aloetic mixture already mentioned. Then, indeed, if all these means failed me, and the disease was evidently not to be got under by the method I had pursued; I should conclude that the great remote cause was too powerful for the weapons I had used against it; or if, in the first instance, so direct and overpowering was the morbific influence, that neither vomiting nor spasms were present, I should have recourse at once to galvanism, to supply the deficiency of nervous influence in the sinking frame. This should be, without loss of time, directed (49 by some skilful hand to the region of the stomach, brain, liver, and heart, and to be continued as long as circumstances might render it necessary. But with regard to the last organ, as it would appear from Dr. W. Philip's earliest experiments that the circulation of the blood was, in a great measure, independent of the nervous influence, and therefore not so likely to be acted on by galvanism as the other part, there might be no harm in ordering the patient, at the same time, to inhale oxygen gas, which has been proved to be a powerful supporter of respiration and animal life. Together with these, yet questionable remedies, others of a minor nature might with advantage be resorted to: such as warmth, sinapisms, stimulating embrocations, &c. If disappointed, however, and it is by no means impossible, in realizing the hopes which I had entertained of being able either to put a stop to the vomiting and purging by the means I have proposed; or, in more serious cases, to renovate the sinking energies of the frame by the use of the most powerful agent that has hitherto been proposed, I should then, in perfect accordance with Mr. Scot in the sentiments he has expressed, however desparingly, recommend a judicious selection from those medicines and means which the zeal, talent, and industry of the different medical officers now in India have put the public in possession of (50): a body of men who have been eloquently eulogized by a distinguished writer, by one who cannot be accused of being lavish of commendation where he does not conceive it to be justly due, and whose creed we believe to be, and it is best,—that, in the present state of science in England, infinitely more good is to be done by a close and somewhat rigid examination, than by a flattering and less discriminating applause. If disappointed, I repeat, it will at least be admitted that little time could have been lost in giving a trial to the mode which I had suggested. In its failure I should but join the numerous band of those who have hitherto laboured in the same good cause: if, on the other hand, it shall be found that I have had the good fortune to throw even one feeble ray amidst the gloom which has so long prevailed, the reward will be in my own breast, where nothing can ever be received with indifference which is at all connected with the prosperity and happiness of our Indian dominions."

* Dr. A. confesses that he never saw a case of epidemic cholera!

* Dr. A. considers giving magnesia in milk as prescribing at the same time a bane and antidote.

(47) I can find but one solitary instance of any examination of this kind having been made; and that was by the intelligent Dr. P. Scot, of the Madras establishment, as is noticed in Mr. W. Scot's Report, page 58. It was in a case that terminated favourably, when nothing had been given internally but magnesia and milk; he says he discovered no acid in the discharges, so was at a loss to imagine how the medicine could have cured the disease, but supposed the bland nature of the milk must have allayed the acrimony, and so put a stop to the vomiting. No! it was the antacid, the magnesia that was in this case sanative. I am of opinion that the fluid vomited up on such occasions somewhat resembles what is eructated in Cardialgia Sputatoria, which in certain instances is much less marked by an acid than in others: this is a disease Dr. Good believes may probably owe its existence to a peculiar inactivity of the proper absorbents of the stomach. It may have been a case in which the acid principle was much diluted, that Mr. P. Scot alludes to, so not easily detected; for true it is, in complaints of this nature, to use the words of the enlightened author just named, "The existence of an acrimony from acidity seems to be common to all its varieties."—See Dr. Good's Study of Medicine, vol. i. page 125; also 123 and 126.

(48) Weak, well-prepared pepper water, with a little toasted bread, may be safely taken, or ginger tea made not too strong.

(49) In Aldini's mode of applying galvanism he requires no incision to be made in the integuments, but that the patient should be simply laid on a sofa, and covered with the clothes.—See Aldini's General Views of Galvanism to Medical Purposes, pages 55 and 56.

(50) I cannot here refrain from mentioning the good effects I have known derived from changing situation and air, at the very commencement of ardent remittent fever in India; and have heard of one instance in which Cholera had been checked by the same means: the gentleman had been taken ill over night, but made a powerful exertion, was carried on next morning with the army, and by a little care was in a few days quite well.

At Calcutta, on the 28th September, very suddenly, at his Residence in Doontollah, in the 48th year of his age, Nowrojee Sorabjee, a man universally lamented. He was a Parsee Merchant, and one of the first of his Nation that settled in Calcutta. His career in life was fortunate, and he evinced a peculiar shrewdness of mind and quickness of talent in all the situations of trust in which he was placed. In Bombay, in Canton, and in Calcutta, he formed friendships with Natives, Chinese, and Europeans, and was deservedly held in great respect. Whatever may be the peculiarities of different forms of Religion, it may be generally remarked, that the man who sincerely and piously observes the Ordinances of his faith will be a good member of Society; Nowrojee was a striking illustration of this fact. He lived in the most strict observance of the form of his Religion, and most of his leisure was devoted to the sacred offices which are held of importance by the Parsees. That he spared no expense in his attention to these matters is best evinced by the very liberal share he contributed towards the establishment of a Burying-ground for his nation in Bengal; a piece of duty which cost him no less than 35,000 Rupees. Pious without cant liberal without affectation, he had the dignity and urbanity of the gentleman, and he was no less remarkable for the generosity of his disposition, which procured him the gratitude of many distressed Christians as well as other objects of compassion, than he was for those mild and respectful manners which gained him the esteem of the Mercantile community of this city. His memory will long be cherished with feelings of unmingled regret.

The homeward bound Ship Rockingham is expected to sail on Saturday.

H. M. S. Tamar sails immediately for Rangoon.

We are unable to announce the arrival of any of the expected Ships from England---the passage so late in the Season is far from certain; and taking into the account, the detention at places Ships may touch at, we need not be surprised at their being long out.

The Transports Golconda and William Money sailed for Rangoon on Tuesday.

SUPREME COURT---The Fourth Session of OYER and TERMINER and GENERAL GAOL DELIVERY for the present year will commence at the Court House on Monday forenoon next, pursuant to Proclamation.

According to a Register published in the India Gazette, the fall of Rain at Arrakan in the month of July was nearly 60 inches; in August it was rather more than 43½---there was a "good deal of Rain in April, and much more in May and June," but the Rain Guage was not ready before the end of June, and the actual fall was not measured in consequence. The greatest height of the Thermometer in July, as given in the Register, appears to have been 89; and the least height 77: In August the greatest height registered was 90,4°; the least 77°.

[Government Gazette, October 6.

PROME, 19TH SEPT.

I told you in my last that in consequence of a Flag of Truce having arrived from the King of Ava, Col. Tidy the Adjutant General to the Army here was going up to Meeady together with Lieut. Smith of the Navy, and the Interpreter (Sarkies by name), to meet the Kyewoongee or Prime Minister to the King of Ava, to hear what he had to propose on the part of the King in the way of peace. They left this on the 7th inst. and arrived within a mile of Meeady the next evening, where they were most graciously received by the whole of the Burmans. Orders were immediately issued by the Prime Minister to build a large house for the English Rajah or British General, meaning Colonel Tidy, which was done in a few hours; there was a Guard of honor of 2,000 men to receive him, and a Band of Music and lots of dancing girls, and all the Sailors had lots of rice, fowls, &c. &c. given to them, and a blue jacket given to each man, which pleased Jack not a little. The next morning the two great men held a conference at the Minister's Lootoo or hall of audience, and continued to meet every day until the 18th inst. when Col. Tidy and party returned and arrived here this morning the 19th inst. The result of the conference is this---That there is to be an Armistice from this day to the 15th of next month. That the Kyeewungee or Prime Minister comes within 20 miles of Prome to a place called Yownbenzike situated half way between Meeady and Prome to treat with Gen. Sir A. CAMPBELL who is to go up on the 2d for the purpose, when the final arrangements are to be concluded, and I think and it is the general opinion (unless the terms proposed are too hard) that the result will be Peace---The Kyeewungee told Col. Tidy that he should go down to meet our General with a guard of 500 men with muskets and 500 with spears, and that we might bring armed men the same number---He also observed that it was the etiquette of the Country for all men of rank to move with a large armed force, or he should have been most happy to have met our General with 20 men.---It is not known what we want them to do, for ------ has not arrived from Calcutta, but is hourly expected; the Steam boat has been sent to Rangoon for him, and is expected every instant. Also Sir JAMES BRISBANE the Commodore, who is coming up here to take the command of the Navy. It is supposed that Sir A. CAMPBELL will take the Flank Companies of each of the European Regiments here, to give us all a chance of seeing the conclusion of the business.

By letters from Bangalore we are informed that the Honorable the GOVERNOR and Lady MUNRO left that station, for Madras, on the evening of the 5th instant under a salute of 19 guns---and that his Excellency Lieutenant General BOWSER, having concluded the Inspection and Review of the different Corps at that station, left Bangalore for the Presidency on the same evening by a different route, under a salute of 17 guns.

[Mad. Cour. Oct. 11.

"At the conference" says a correspondent, "between Sir Archibald Campbell and the Minister, each of the negociators was to bring a thousand men, and to encamp within a thousand yards of each other: the conference to be held in the intermediate space: It would appear however that Sir A. Campbell, was not furnished with particular instructions as to the terms; and that he was anxiously looking for Mr. Robinson the Commissioner who was expected from Calcutta, and it was concluded had these instructions. The armistice was published at Prome on the 19th. In the conference which Colonel Tidy had with the Minister, the latter is said to have used much conciliatory language; and to have said, among other things, that the English had run away with the hearts of all the inhabitants of the country, and that none would again oppose us." The army it was said had ample provisions for six months to come."

Civil Service Annuity Fund.---At a Meeting of the Civil Service, convened at the Town-Hall, on Saturday the 1st October, 1825. in pursuance of the Advertisement in the Government Gazette of the 11th August last, Mr. Udny was, on the Motion of Mr. Pattle, unanimously requested to take the Chair.

The Proceedings held by the Civil Service Annuity Fund Committee, since the last general Meeting of the Civil Service, were then laid upon the table by the Chairman of that Committee, and on the motion of Mr. Pattle, with the unanimous concurrence of the Meeting, the whole of these Proceedings were consecutively read

The Chairman then moved, seconded by Mr. Bayley.

"That this Meeting desire to express their sense of the zeal and ability with which the Committee, appointed under the Resolutions of the Meeting of the 1st January, 1822, have successfully exerted themselves to carry into effect the important object entrusted to their Management by the Civil Service, and their entire approbation of the Proceedings, which the Committee have adopted in the exercise of their functions."

Mr. Courtney Smith rose, and proposed the following amendment, seconded by Mr. H. Shakespear.

"That by the 30th of the printed Resolutions of the Hon'ble Court of Directors, received by the Committee with Mr. Secretary Lushington's letter of the 12th May last, the expediency of recommending to the Honorable Court any essential additions to, or alterations of, the original Rules of the Institution, as fixed by the Court of Directors must be determined on by a majority of a general Meeting, annual or special, convened according to the 29th Resolution of the same printed document; and that, consequently, the transmission to Government of the letter of the 16th July last, which letter proposes certain alterations of an essential nature, accompanied with the sanction and recommendation of the Committee, must be considered as a measure exceeding the Committee's powers, and the letter above mentioned, together with the alterations so suggested, as still open to the approbation or disapprobation of the first general Meeting which may be convened after the election of the Managers, agreeably to the 29th Resolution, above referred to."

The amendment having been put and negatived by a large majority, Mr. Bayley's original motion was put to the vote, and carried by acclamation.

Mr. Bayley then addressed the Chair, and proposed the following Resolution,---which was seconded by Mr. Holt Mackenzie, and carried unanimously:

"That the alterations and additions suggested or recommended to Government by the Committee, are, as a matter of course, open to the approbation or disapprobation of the first general Meeting which may be convened agreeably to the 29th Paragraph of the Resolutions."

Mr. H. Shakespear proposed the following Resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Pattle, and carried unanimously:

"That the Members of the Civil Service now present, proceed for themselves, and for the absent members by Proxy, to elect Managers of the Fund, under the 20th Rule of the Institution."

Mr. Pattle, seconded by the Chairman, moved,

"That the following Gentlemen be appointed Scrutineers to conduct the election of Managers, and receive the Votes of the Service, reporting the result for the information of the Meeting, viz. Messrs. T. Plowden, R. Hunter, E. Molony, and J. A. Dorin," which was carried unanimously.

The Scrutineers then retired for nearly two hours, and on their return reported the election to have fallen on Messrs. Holt Mackenzie, James Pattle, Charles Morley, H. Sargent, and W. H. Macnaghten, who were declared duly elected Managers.

Mr. Pattle proposed, that the thanks of the Meeting be given to Mr. Udny for his able conduct in the Chair, which was carried by acclamation.

The Meeting then broke up.

G. UDNY, Chairman.

We understand, that the alterations of an essential nature, mentioned by Mr. C. Smith in his amendment, are two additional boons of great importance, which Government has recommended to the favorable consideration of the Court of Directors.

[Gov. Gazt. October 6.

H. M. 87th Regiment embarked yesterday for Rangoon.

His Excellency Sir EDWARD PAGET proceeds, we understand, to England immediately on the Madras, Captain FAYRER. The Madras sails on or about the 20th instant. The accommodations of this fine ship are of the very highest order, and all who have had an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the internal routine of the Madras, speak in the warmest terms of admiration of the style and comfort observed on board, no less than of the professional skill and experience, as well as the uniform kindness and urbanity, of her Commander.

The following is a copy of the Division Order issued by General MORRISON on the occasion of the lamented death of Mr. GRANT, the late Superintending Surgeon of the Aracan Division.

"Fort Arrakan, 9th September, 1825.

"Yesterday morning, about half past 7 "o'clock, the valuable life of the late W. L. "GRANT, Esq. Superintending Surgeon, ter"minated;—all who witnessed his indefatiga"ble exertions and unwearied attention in the "discharge of his duty, must lament the public "loss; those who were favoured by an acquain"tance with the lamented individual, will "grieve for the loss sustained.

"The mortal remains are to be removed for "interment at half past 5 o'clock this evening. "The attendance of all staff officers in full "uniform is requested. and such of his friends "who wish to pay the last tribute of respect to "the memory of departed worth, will be pleased to assemble at the house named, to join "the funeral. A party corresponding to the "rank of the deceased to be furnished from "the garrison, under the details to be issued "by the Fort Adjutant."

All reports concur in the likelihood of our soon having to discuss some interesting points with the Bhurtpore folks. We do not consider ourselves at liberty to advert to the rumours, afloat more in detail.

[India Gazette, Oct. 6.

The Prince of Wales Island Gazette of the 3d September contains the following account in regard to the alarming insurrection and rebellion in the island of Java:---

"The Hugh Crawford from England the 11th Dec. and Singapore the 17th ultimo, arrived on Saturday last, and brings accounts of an alarming insurrection and rebellion in the Island of Java. The origin of the disturbance is not correctly known, and we receive with caution the contradictory reports in circulation. It appears, however, that a few days previous to the Hugh Crawford leaving Batavia the Dutch Government received intelligence of some Treasure amounting to 27,000 Rupees having been taken, and the Escort consisting of 45 men killed by a body of Insurgents headed by the Son of the Old Sultan, the Natives were afterwards attacked by a body of Dutch Troops, who were defeated and about 100 of them killed and wounded.

All the Military excepting one or at most two Companies were sent off to Samarang and that neighbourhood by water in Transports hired for the purpose, the Natives it is said were about 80 Miles from Batavia."

[John Bull, Oct. 7.

ARRACAN.---We are sorry to learn that the sickness at Arracan does not abate. General MORRISON, we regret to hear, has been under the necessity of leaving the place from illness, but whether for a few days or with the view of coming to the Presidency, we have not ascertained. The descriptions we have had from eye witnesses, and by letter, of the pestilential state of Arracan, from the impossibility of properly disposing of the dead, are most melancholy. The effect upon the living, of beholding dead bodies, in a state of decay, and of constantly perceiving the effluvia, may easily be conjectured.

[Beng. Hurk. October 8.

The very voluminous Papers printed by order of the Court of Proprietors, and referring to what have been called the 'Hydrabad Transactions' have come into our hands. Their perusal must force upon the mind of every one friendly to the interests of the Honorable Company, the conviction, that the agitation of this question has done more to injure these interests, than any thing, that has occurred for some time. The injury however is not, we fear, as yet known or developed to its full extent. The appearance of the MARQUESS OF HASTINGS in England, and the errand on which, no doubt exists, that he has gone to that country, must revive the discussion in all its acerbity, and in all probability lead to results to be deprecated by all, who contend for the permanence of the Company's Government. Independent, indeed of the Hydrabad investigation, the events of the two or three last years have been of such a nature, as to leave no doubt, that on the question of renewing the Charter, these events will not only be quoted, but dwelt upon, at least with vehemence, if not with effect, by those who are prepared to oppose this measure. In looking forward to the arguments, that will be employed pro and con, when the day of trial arrives, we should feel disposed to regard them less as they bear upon the Company, and their interests, or even on the interests of British Commerce, than as they must affect the welfare of the millions now under our government. It is a consideration of their stake in the discussion, which to us will give it all its momentous worth and importance. A monopoly of power for a long series of years has interwoven our institutions so much with those, which we found in taking possession of the country, and compelled the peaceable and industrious native population, to lean so entirely on our power, for support and protection, that their removal must on all hands be allowed to be an evil the most dreadful, that could overtake India: and if this is hazarded to the extent, maintained by the advocates for things, as they are, by any change, we shall certainly be left only a choice of evils: and the Company's Government, with all its evils and anomalies on its head, may be found the less of the two.

[John Bull, October 8.

As the season for active operations in the field approaches, the aspect of affairs becomes more and more warlike; and rumour of war in the West has now succeeded to complete the chain of expected hostility, stretching from the Indus to the Erawaddy. The Bombay Gazette fully corroborates the statement we gave some days ago, that the Government of that Presidency were busily engaged in preparations to quell a disturbance in Cutch, and judging from the force to be employed---not less than 7,000 troops---we ought perhaps to dignify the enemy in that quarter with a more honourable appellation, than that of 'banditti'. They have certainly chosen a favourable period to annoy us; and we scarcely marvel, that if impatient of our yoke, they should imagine, that they see in the present posture of affairs, an encouragement to throw it off. That they will feel at once, their own weakness and the weight of the British power and resentment, cannot for a moment be doubted; and in their attempts to make a diversion, in favour of their brother insurgents in Bundlecund, they will unquestionably reap any thing in the end, but advantage, or independence. The very fact, however, of the attempt, and the evident extent, to which it is meditated, afford matter of very serious reflexion to all, who are interested in the permanence of our Eastern Empire; and we apprehend will suggest measures, in regard to the government of these turbulent provinces that will more effectually tend to curb their licentiousness, than those, to which we have hitherto trusted their tranquillity. Every day appears to us more and more to demonstrate the necessity of a Central Presidency or Government, vested with the fullest powers to act, on any such emergencies, as the present arising. As matters now stand, the efficiency is found, where all is peace and contentment: the weakness and inefficiency, where all is as yet but setting into order—where passing events are proving, that the disposition still prevails, to return to old habits of pillage and plunder, when the least prospect of impunity presents itself.

The India Gazette contains an account of the sickness of our troops at Arracan, which is truly distressing, and on the authority of a Correspondent, ascribes it among other causes to one, which surely demands notice, both in justice to the public service and to the particular department, to which it belongs, to provide a sufficient supply of "nourishing food and warm clothing" for troops upon service. We receive the accounts of the brave officers and men, who fall in battle, with a grief, that is at least tempered by the reflexion, that life was enjoyed, until the moment, that it was yielded in the service of their country; but it is heart rending to be told, that the brave men lingered under the dysentery and the fever, until death found them powerless and nerveless, and conveyed them to a grave where in the eyes of the world, no glory awaited them: but a feeling of a more indignant nature is roused, where we hear that the Soldier, who risks his life in an unhealthy climate in the execution of his duty, is doomed to encounter its dangers with an "insufficient supply of nourishing food, and warm clothing." Such is the statement, gone forth to the public in the columns of the India Gazette. It appears to us a statement of grave, and weighty importance.

BRITISH TRAVELLER, MAY 31.

LOSS OF THE GREAT AMERICAN TIMBER SHIP THE COLUMBUS.

On Tuesday evening, the Dolphin, of Teignmouth, W. D. Dimes, master, arrived in Cork having on board the captain (Daniel Nesbitt) [illegible]ro, and crew, seventy-three in number, of the great American timber ship Columbus, about which so much was stated in the papers on her arrival in England from Quebec, with a cargo of upwards of 3 900 tons of timber. This immense vessel sailed from the Downs on the 26th of April, in ballast, for St. Johns, (New Brunswick), with favourable weather until the 17th May, in lat. 46 34 N. long. 29, 2, when a dreadful storm arose, with the wind W. N. W., which occasioned the vessel to roll in such a tremendous manner, as to render her almost unmanageable. The gale commenced at an early hour of the morning, and continued without intermission until ten o'clock, when it was discovered that the vessel's timbers were opened and that a leak was gaining on her at the rate of two feet per hour. All hands immediately went to the pumps, and notwithstanding that they had the assistance of a steam-engine of such power as would discharge (it is stated) at the rate of 1,400 gallons of water per minute, still they were unable to get it under. In this perilous situation they descried a sail about a league and a half to windward, the first they had seen since they left England, and they made signals of distress to her, when she bore down, and proved to be the Dolphin, bound to St. John's, Newfoundland, with a general cargo. Captain Munro having mentioned their distressed situation, requested that the other vessel should remain in company to afford them assistance—the Captain did so, and the crew of the Columbus redoubled their exertions, if possible, to save her, but to no effect, for after being in this state for eight hours; up to 6 P.M. she rolled so much that the steam engine was rendered unserviceable, and the pumps were choaked, there being from 14 to 16 feet water in the hold. The captain finding all attempts to save her fruitless, he then considered it necessary to consult their own safety, and accordingly put out the launch, with a quantity of provisions, to convey on board the Dolphin, but in a moment she was stoved to pieces against the ship's bow. Their situation now became truly alarming, as every moment they expected the vessel would founder, her timbers became so open. There only remained two boats, and those were launched, and in them they succeeded in getting on board the other vessel, the captain of which, finding he had not sufficient provisions and water for the entire, amounting to eighty-six, including his own crew, changed his course and sailed for England, with the intention of landing at Falmouth. In this attempt he was frustrated by the southerly winds that prevailed, and after beating about for some time in great distress, being obliged to subsist on a biscuit and a pint of water each man, and four pounds of pork between twelve per day, from the period of their shipwreck, they arrived in Cove as above stated, where they received every possible attention from the gallant Admiral (Plamin) now on this station, who had the men sent on board his flag ship, the Semiramis, until they could be disposed of. Had they remained out three days longer, their situation would have been most deplorable, for the provisions and water ran so short, that each man would of necessity have been limitted to a single glass per diem; the latter, and of the former there only remained of their entire stock, about 60lbs. The conduct of Captain Dunley and his crew, on this trying occasion, was truly exemplary and humane, and is deserving of the highest praise—indeed such heroic conduct, for such it must be considered, should be liberally rewarded.

Wednesday evening, Captain Munro arrived in Cork, and waited on his worship the Mayor, who sympathised in their misfortunes: and in the absence of any fund to meet calls of so pressing a nature as the present, he has instituted a subscription for the poor sufferers; and we have the best founded expectations that our liberal and wealthy citizens will come forward and aid the chief magistrate in such a praise worthy undertaking. Subscriptions will be received at the Mansion-house, Club houses, Commercial-buildings, the Chamber of Commerce, or at any of the Newspaper-offices. It is due to Captain Munro, to state, that he did not leave the vessel for three hours after the steam-engine was rendered useless, and not until all his men were safe; and when he did go, he had considerable difficulty in reaching the other vessel. The Columbus must have gone down in an hour or two afterwards, as in that time the Dolphin bore up and a vestige of her could not be seen.—Cork Advertiser.

LORD BYRON AND THE GREEKS.

The following letter has been addressed to the Editor of a Morning Paper:—

His Majesty's Sloop Alacrity, Malta, Feb. 24. 1825.

Sir,—A book has been handed to me, intitled, "Greece, during Lord Byron's residence in that country, in 1823 and 1824."

Letter 31 concerns myself.

Lord Byron did not conduct the business on my behalf.

Colonel Leicester Stanhope must know very little of the Greeks, if he imagines that restitution of stolen property is to be got out of them in any other way, but that which he is pleased to style "a bullying manner."

The "bullying manner" was being determined to have payment for property stolen from a poor Ionian merchant. The crew of his boat had been insulted and maltreated (as is usual with the Greek corsairs). The sum mentioned in the petition was 400 dollars.

The petition of the merchant was delivered to me by Sir F. Stover, resident at Zante. I was not able to examine the people myself as to the truth of the statement, but knowing that the Ionians and Greeks, were equally addicted to lying on all matters wherein money is concerned, and that the one in all probability had overcharged, and the other had understated, I only demanded one half, 200 dollars, which even by Mavrocordato [illegible]self, was considered fair.

It was Lord Byron's decided opinion, that the best friendship for the Greeks was that which made them pay for piracy. He told me he had often warned Mavrocordato on the subject of the piracy of his corsairs, and repeatedly told him that he would have a British vessel of war about his ears.

I beg you will give publicity to this letter in your Paper, that people may not be led away with an idea, that the Captains of British men of war on this station "bully" those high-minded, truth-telling, never throat cutting Greeks.

C. YORKE.

Mr. Chantrey is now here, for the double purpose of seeing the statue, which he has executed, of the late Lord Chief Baron, erected in the County Hall, and of selecting a situation for the equestrian statue of his Majesty. The statue of the Chief Baron is a beautiful chaste production, and preserves an admirable likeness of the esteemed original. The site chosen for the King's statue is in George-street, at the head of Hanover-street, and we think it is one of the best that can be selected, not only in respect to the consequence it will give to he most noble street in the kingdom, but from the admirable position as to exhibition & thoroughfare. We understand the monument of Mr. Pitt is to be placed at the head of Frederick-street, and probably that to Burns at the head of Castle-street: and we know that the extremity of George-street, towards Charlotte-square, has already been selected for the monument to the late Earl of Hopetoun.—We very much applaud the idea of bringing all these noble works together; they become of themselves of more consequence, and at the same time give consequence to the street. Mr. Chantrey, we understand, has embraced the opportunity of his being in Edinburgh, to discharge an obligation of some years standing, in executing a bust of Mr. Baron Hume, and has availed himself of the accommodation afforded him by Mr. Joseph, to model the head in the study of that gentleman.—Caledonian Mercury.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT,—June 1.

LOGAN v. FAIRLIE.

His Honour gave judgment in this case. He stated that a Mr. John Holme made his will in the year 1810 at Calcutta, by which he bequeathed the whole of his property to be equally divided between his brother and sister in this country, with a provision, that if his sister was dead before she could become entitled to her moiety, her children should have it equally divided between them. The testator appointed a Mr David Clarke, in the East Indies, to be his executor, and died in the year 1816. Mr. Clarke afterwards converted the whole of the property into money, which amounted to 7,000*l.* and remitted it to Fairlie and Co. as his agents here, to be paid as the testator had directed. Messrs. Fairlie accordingly paid to testator's brother, 3,500*l.* but finding that Ellen Logan (the sister) had died at Berwick upon-Tweed before the testator, leaving nine infant children, they refused in any way to part with the other 3,500*l.* except under the order of the Court. A bill was then filed on behalf of the infants, praying that the 3,500*l.* might be ordered to be paid into Court, and then to be invested in the Accountant-General's name for the benefit of the children. All this was done, and upon the hearing of the cause the nine children were declared to be severally entitled to a ninth part of the fund. The present application was on the part of one of the children, who had now attained her twenty-first year, that her ninth part might be ordered to be paid out to her, and the question was, whether the legacy duty should be paid in this country on her part of the legacy. Strictly speaking, this question was not cognizable by this Court, the Attorney-General having the right to litigate that question in the Court of Exchequer; the Court of Chancery, however, could decide the question, but yet it would give the petitioner the option of going to the Court of Exchequer if she were dissatisfied with the opinion of this Court.

Mr. Pemberton interposed and said, the amount was too small to litigate the question further.

His Honour then said, if a testator die in India, leaving the whole of his property there, appointing an executor there, with directions to remit the money to legatees in this country, and if such money was remitted either to the legatees here, or to agents to be paid to them, the legacy duty in such a case is not payable; but if part of the testator's estate be found in England without any specific appropriation of such part, then that is to be considered as administering in this country, and the legacy duty must be paid on it. The latter was the case here, in the opinion of the Court, because the 3,500*l.* had been remitted to this country to be paid to Mrs. Logan, but Mrs. Logan's legacy had become lapsed, and therefore that money formed a residuary legacy to be administered in this country to other persons, consequently the legacy duty would have to be paid upon it. It was to be observed, however, that this suit had gone on all along irregularly, because no personal representative had been brought before the Court, but the objection was now too late to avail.

Colonel A. Macdonald, of the Recruiting Department, Westminster, it is understood will be appointed Adjutant-General at Bengal vice Sir Thomas M'Mahon, promoted to the rank of Major-General.

Earl of Aboyne,	Lord Cathcart,
Earl of Dunmore,

The only Proxy Commission produced was that of the Earl of Mar, authorising Lord Nairne to vote for him; along with which was tendered the noble Earl's protest against the place assigned to him on the roll.

Among the Peers present at this election was the Earl of Stirling, as above noticed, whose title has for some years been dormant, having been vested in the Countess of Stirling his mother, who died 12th Sept. 1814. The Earl now, for the first time, took his place among our ancient nobility, and voted on this occasion.

Mr Mackenzie stated that in cases where a claim was made to a dormant title, the clerks conceived it their duty to receive the votes of such claimants. He also mentioned that a claim had been entered for the title of the Earl of Stirling in 1761, by a descendant of the uncle of the first Earl, but as the claimant was not then prepared with his evidence it was agreed not to permit him to vote. The present Earl, however, was in a different situation, he being the lineal descendant of the first Earl, consequently the clerks felt it their duty to receive his vote.

Sir Walter Scott then intimated that twenty votes had been given as prescribed by law, and all in favour of Lord Strathallan, whom they were about to return to the High Court of Chancery accordingly as duly elected.

Viscount Strathallan returned thanks to the noblemen present for the honour now conferred upon him.

The return having been made up in presence of the Peers, the business was closed by prayer from Dr Bryce.

In the afternoon Lord Strathallan entertained the other Noblemen and a large party of friends with an elegant dinner in the British Hotel.

THE BRITISH PRESS.—June 4.

Alexandria in Egypt, March 23.

It is reported that an English Envoy is expected in this city, who, in the name of the British Government is to propose a plan to the Viceroy for forming a junction between the Red Sea and the Mediterranean.

The Viceroy has sold in a short time Mocha cotton to the amount of twelve millions of talaris.

There are so many merchants from all quarters now here, that there is want of accommodation. A room costs from 800 to 1,000 talaris. The goods imported lose 25 per cent., the market being overstocked, and even at that rate it is difficult to sell them. The harbour is crowded with ships, which cannot take in their cargoes, and cannot depart on account of the bad weather.

BELL'S WEEKLY MESSENGER,—June 6.

The Paris Papers of Monday contain an account of a serious accident which had nearly befallen the King, as he approached Rheims, and which actually befel some of his suite. It appears, according to the details as they are given, that the noise of the cannon, in firing a salute, frightened the horses of the carriage in which were the Dukes d'Aumont and Damas, and Counts Cosse and Curial The carriage itself was dashed to pieces; Count Curial had his left shoulder blade broken, and the right lacerated by the glass, while the Duke de Damas was also dangerously wounded. Count Cosse received a violent contusion on the head His Majesty, it is added, likewise ran considerable danger, for the echo having doubled the noise of the cannon, the horses of his carriage were frightened, and it was with great difficulty they were quieted. The King was, of course, much distressed at the accident, and refused to proceed to Tinquen, till he was assured that the wounded noblemen of his suite were not in imminent danger. —Subsequent accounts, say, that Count Curial had two ribs broken, and as an old wound had re-opened in his breast, and the disorder had become complex, great apprehensions were entertained for his life. This was not the only accident which happened about this period. On the 27th of May, a fire broke out in the stables of the Post House at Braine, two leagues from Fismes, which destroyed 18 of the King's horses. The origin of the conflagration could not be traced. A terrible accident also happened at Rennes on the 19th ult As some soldiers of the garison were preparing fireworks for the celebration of the coronation, a spark fell on the powder in the apartment. The explosion was dreadful. The roof of the house was thrown across the river, trees of a public walk were torn up by the roots, the windows of the neighbouring houses were shattered at the distance of 300 paces, and about 60 of the artillerymen were killed or wounded. The bodies of four or five were buried under the ruins. Some were saved in an extraordinary manner, being thrown into the air, and alighting on their feet with slight injuries, in the neighbouring river, in gardens, and in the streets.

HAMPSHIRE TELEGRAPH AND SUSSEX CHRONICLE.—June 6.

In the Court of King's Bench yesterday, Mr. Hamilton Browne, late Chief Assistant of the Office of the Ionian Senate, obtained a Verdict, with 250*l.* damages, against Mr. Murray, the Bookseller, for a statement in the 57th No. of the Quarterly Review, charging him with ingratitude to his Patron Sir T. Maitland, and with confessing that he had secretly transmitted to England, documents which in his official capacity came under his controul, in consequence of which he was dismissed.

Pitt Club Dinner.—The Members of the Pitt Club assembled on Saturday, at the City of London Tavern, to celebrate the Birth of the Statesman whose political principles form the bond of their association.—Sir Edward Knatchbull was in the Chair; who was supported on his right by the Lord Chancellor, Mr. Peel, Mr. Bankes, Lord Rolls, and Sir Robert Peel; on his left by the Earl of Westmoreland, Earl Bathurst, the Earl of Harwood, Lord Kenyon, the Hon. Captain Curzon, and Lord Hotcham.—The dinner having been concluded, and Non Nobis Domine sung,—The Chairman proposed the health of the King, three times three, (drank amid enthusiastic applause.)—"God save the King."—The Duke of York, and the other members of the Royal Family, three times three. The name of his Royal Highness was received by an universal burst of rapturous applause, which lasted several minutes, and his health was drank accompanied by cheering, clapping of hands, waving of handkerchiefs, and every demonstration of attachment and respect.—"Hail Star of Brunswick" The Chairman then gave—The Memory of William Pitt. This toast was drunk with three times three, amid loud and long continued cheering. Song, "Pitt's illustrious name" The Army and Navy of the United Kingdom, three times three—"Rule Britannia."—The illustrious House of Brunswick, and may they ever remember the principles that placed their family on the Throne of Britain.—(Enthusiastic applause.)—"Hail Star of Brunswick."

The following stanza of the glee. "The King and the Church," was hailed with shouts of applause and laughter:—

"Here's a health to Old England,
The King and the Church,
May all plotting conrivers

The Chairman then rose to propose a toast to which he thought they would all accede. That toast was,

"The Protestant Ascendancy."—(Tumultuous applause)—His Majesty's Ministers, and may they long continue in office.—This toast was drunk with three times three, amid loud applause.—After the cheering had ceased, the Lord Chancellor, Mr. Secretary Peel, the Earl of Westmoreland, and Lord Bathurst, rose, and remained standing, whilst the Lord Chancellor addressed the company.—He observed—

"It is just about twenty years since that great man, whose memory we are this day met here to celebrate, was placed in his grave. But although his mortal remains be mouldering in the tomb, his name will be everlasting.—(Applause.)—I had the honour of attending the first of these Meetings, which the grateful people of this country have instituted to the memory of Mr. Pitt. I stated upon that occasion that, as long as God should grant me life and health to witness the succeeding anniversaries of this celebration, I should consider it as one of the first duties incumbent upon me not to be absent from it.—(Applause)—Gentlemen, the Protestant Ascendancy, to which as it has been made one of your toasts, I may advert—the Protestant Ascendency, I trust in God, for the sake of those who quarrel with it, may ever continue to be enjoyed in this country.—(Loud Cheering,)—There was a time when a difference of religious opinion was attributed to Mr. Pitt, and those who were the supporters of his political principles. But I know of no difference of opinion between that great man and the humble individual who now presumes to tell you, that he will ever act according to his principles. Nothing could have induced Mr. Pitt to make any alteration in Church or State, which he was not sure would be consistent with the security of both. Upon this point, as to what is, and what is not, consistent with the Constitution, I know that different opinions are held by most respectable men. In the different projects which we are destined to witness upon this occasion, I trust we only see different men seeking by different means the same end.—(Hear hear,)—I trust the object is the same in all: but what I say is, that, to the utmost of my power, I will stand by the political institutions of the country as they were formed in the time of Pitt. Let me say, Gentlemen, that upon this subject my political opinions are fixed, so as that nothing can alter them. Ecclesiastical tyranny, be assured, will always lead to civil despotism; whilst ecclesiastical freedom ensures civil liberty,—(Loud cheers.)—With these opinions, which I do not conceive it possible for me to alter, were I not to wish to every subject in this country all the toleration which he can possibly enjoy, consistent with the security of the Constitution in Church and State, I should be unworthy of your favour, and of the high station I hold. I firmly believe that a departure from these principles would in one moment destroy our happy Constitution in Church and State, and do full as much mischief to those who dissent as to those who agree in them. The Constitution to which I adhere was begun at the time of the Revolution, it was fixed at the time of the Revolution, and through a century of difficulty and danger it had conducted this country happily and prosperously, the admiration and envy of the world.—(Cheers.)—Gentlemen, do not lose the blessings secured to you by the Constitution.—(Cheers.)—I should not be deserving of the compliments which have been paid to me by the Chair if I did not state to you, that during the short time I have to remain in this world, to the utmost of my power I will support the Constitution under which I live, and may God Almighty allow me to leave the world knowing that it is secure."

[The most enthusiastic plaudits continued to greet this speech long after the Noble and Learned Lord and his Majesty's Ministers present had resumed their seats.]

The Chairman then gave "May the principles of Mr. Pitt ever animate the Government;" three times three, (drunk with loud cheering.) Song "The Pilot that weathered the Storm."

The health of the Earl of Westmoreland, and Mr. Secretary Peel, were drunk with marked applause.—The number of gentlemen present amounted to between two and three hundred.

THE EVENING STAR.—June 10.

In the Lord Major's Court, yesterday, Mr Swift, a pewterer, in Shoe lane, recovered 3300*l.* in compensation for the demolition of his premises or new Fleet Market. The case derived some interest from Mr. Brougham having undertaken the case of the claimant in a Court somewhat out of his sphere. The Learned Counsel excited a good deal of mirth by one or two sly hits at the Recorder, whom he designated as the "excellent" Recorder, &c. and the erroneous manner of valuing things at the bare market price, or what they might fetch. "Thus, if he were to value the picture opposite," said the Learned Counsel, pointing to a full length portrait of Chief Justice Camden painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds, "he would begin by estimating the value of the frame at what it would fetch if sold for firewood, which would be its only value if taken from the picture—that would be fourpence halfpenny; then there was the canvas, which he would estimate at a shilling; and the paint upon it, which he would set down at fourpence, from which he would deduct twopence halfpenny for the injury it had sustained from time. Then there was the figure: he would say, I'll find you a man who in my judgment will paint you as good a figure in four days, and adding the value of his four day's labour, I think the full value of the picture is 19*s.* 7½*d.*"—(Loud laughter, in which the Recorder joined.)—But supposing that the Marquis of Stafford or Earl Grosvenor, or any other Noble Friend of his (Mr. Brougham's) who was a p[atron] collector, being impressed with a high esteem fo[r] the skill of the limner, and veneration for th[e] great man whom it represented, should offer 50[0] was it then to be taken from the owner even at that price, whether he chose or not?"

Curtis and Warren's Fight off!—Tuesday was appointed for making good the second deposit between Dick Curtis and Warren, and Curtis's friends attended to post their blunt. After waiting the limited time, Warren's friends said they had but 10*l.* of the 20*l.* which it was agreed should be paid down on that occasion, and the money down became forfeited to Dick.

CONTEMPORARY LITERATURE. no. VI

The Modern Athens: a Dissection and Demonstration of Men and Things in the Scotch Capital. By a Modern Greek. Second Edition, 8vo.—The very general indignation in which the soi-disant wise ones, male and female, of the Modern Athens were worked by the appearance of this little book, as well as the chastisement which the Athenian editor endeavour to bestow upon the conjectural author or authors, were a sort of promise that it interest would last longer than a day; and that a second edition has been called for within four months of the appearance of the first, is a proof that the promise is realized. The hand of the Greek falls, we think, somewhat more heavily upon the Athenians than might be expected of one subscribing himself as belonging to their own nation; but somehow or other he contrives that it shall generally fall in the right place, so that while the Athenians quarrel with the biting severity of the volume, the chief ground of their vexations seems to be their inability to deny its truth.

A second volume is said to be in the press, in which certain other critics of the North are to be dealt with after the fashion of the Modern Athens; and as to the Athens herself we know not whether in that second volume the author intends to plaster the wounds he has already made, or to inflict new ones. We shall see.

"The Fly, 18, Capt. Martin, is arrived from Valparaiso, whence she sailed on the 20th February, and will proceed homeward about the 1st of next month, taking 1,124,000 dollars.—All was quiet in the Pacific: the Spanish squadron had sailed for Manilla and Cadiz.—General Canterac remains here.—The Viceroy (Laserna), and other officers of the late Peruvian Army, have sailed for Bourdeax. The Spaniards are now completely thrust out of Peru; there is not an European of any consequence in all the Southern and Northern parts of South America. Buenos Ayres is settling down into a federal Republic, and is prospering in every way.—The Mines will all now be worked by English energy, and must be productive to an incomparable degree beyond what they have been known to be.

"The Emperor of Brazil has ordered all the gunbrigs, brigs, and smaller vessels, to be equipped here with haste, to go down to Monte Video, which is threatened by the Buenos Ayrians, upon the plea that that place, by right, belongs to them. There have also been some political disquietudes at Maranham; but Lord Cochrane being upon the spot, and acting against both parties with his accustomed promptitude, tranquillity appears restored.—We daily expect the Jassuer from that port. The arrival of the Wellesley, 74, with Sir Charles Stewart is anxiously expected, when, no doubt, a lesson of wholesome moderation will be read to the young Emperor here, and his political caprices and outrageous fancies be restrained into decent majesterial order.—Since he took it into his head to direct that no ship should fire a salute within the port of Rio, without previously hoisting his, the Imperial, flag on the main, none of the British Officers have attended his levees, nor the ships on any occasion saluted the Brazilian flag. The French Admiral here, has pursued the same conduct.—This head of a boasted "Representative Constitution," is in as fair way of becoming an absolute and despotic Monarch, as the "beloved" of Spain, and his Government nearly as ephemeral.—This people are not yet fitted for such a Constitution as England happily possesses, but, then, a good Government would seek to adopt means corresponding to their present condition and progressive advancement in the scale of intellectual Society.—The Spartiate, Sir George Eyre, is on a cruise; she is in high internal order, as to discipline, &c. but the ship herself is in bad condition: she proved leaky the instant she arrived from England.—The Blanche, 46, Capt. Mends, is kept in constant readiness to go to Monte Video.—The Cambridge, Tartar, Triton, Mersey, and Eclair, are all well, in the Pacific.—The Tartar will be the next ship for England after the Fly."

The Wellesley, 74, Capt. Graham Eden Hamond, C. B. passed Madeira, on the 28th ult. with Sir Chas. Stewart on board, for Rio Janeiro. A letter from Lisbon says—"So far as regards Portugal, it is understood that the Brazil question has been favourably decided: but it remains to be seen how the Brazilians will relish the conditions under which their independence is to be recognised. We are not made acquainted with any of them."
